Additional Briefs on FIRST PAGE

It is time to "line up" your resolutions for the New Year.

The days have again crossed the turning point of the year and are growing gradually longer.

Mrs. Mayo Smith, of Fredericksburg, Va., is in the city, visiting relatives, and all her friends here are glad to see her.

Mr. Russell M. Robinson, of the law firm of W. S. O'Brien & Son left last night for New York City, on professional business.

Mr. Lotte W. Humphrey, of the Charlotte bar, who spent the Christmas holidays with his mother, Mrs. L. W. Humphrey, in this city, left for Charlotte this morning.

The County Alumni of the State University will banquet tomorrow evening in the Elks Club, and the affair is going to be of unusual elegance and social and intellectual enjoyment.

Judge Bland's "County Court" with Solicitor E. A. Humphrey prosecuting had a field day today with malefactors. The good effects of this court is being felt very perceptibly in this community and throughout the county.

This is theatrical week at the Messenger Opera House. All high-class attractions at popular low prices. Begin with tonight and you will not miss a single night of the week, for the Mattice Stock Company is its own best advertisement—that is why it plays a whole week in a town; it goes on its own high merit.

An automobile driven by Mr. Jessie Bradford, of this city, in which he had his wife and children, turned turtle yesterday evening near the Pearson Bridge, and Mrs. Bradford sustained such serious injuries that she could not be brought home, and is now at the home of Mr. Pearson, near the scene of the accident and grave fears are entertained for her recovery.

Mr. John Collins, of Richmond, who is visiting his father Mr. W. H. Collins in this city, and who returns to Richmond tonight, got a "snap shot" of Secretary Daniels, his mother and brother Judge Daniels yesterday afternoon just as they were coming from the Jacob building. Mr. Collins has not yet "developed" the shot, but we are hoping that it will be good and that we may give our readers a cut of it soon.

"TOMORROW"

An American Play by an American Author.

"Tomorrow," the play which Mme. Labadie will present in the form of a dramatic interpretation on Friday, January 2, 1914, at the Woman's Club Room under the auspices of the Woman's Club, deals with a question that is forcing its importance upon the attention of every thinking man and woman of the present day, a question which involves the building of a better race. The theme has been used in various ways by many of our modern dramatists, but it is Percy Mac Kaye's happy treatment of the subject that lifts "Tomorrow" out of the shadow of cold hard facts into the sunshine of a visionary future of great possibilities. The facts are undeniably plain, but their frankness is softened by a fine touch of poetic imagination that illuminates the lines and throws into bold relief the motive power of the drama.

The author spins the thread of his story in a most delightful way while he paints a faithful picture of things as they are in contrast to things as they should be, if we would have a fair tomorrow.

Under a blue California sky, in the garden of Peter Dale, a thoughtful biologist, who breeds his plants scientifically to obtain ultimate perfection, the characters in this drama of life work out their destiny. Through them the author points the truth of his own assertion that the social, political and religious aspects of our life are radically conditioned by the biological, and that the concept and opportunity of children as the creative instrument of a happier tomorrow must become a practical issue in education.

HON. JOSEPHUS DANIELS

As announced in Saturday's Argus, Goldsboro has the honor of the presence of the Secretary of the U. S. Navy, Hon. Josephus Daniels, as a visitor yesterday, where he spent the day with his revered mother, Mrs. Mary C. Daniels, at the home of his brother, Judge F. A. Daniels.

And now, in justice to the Honorable Secretary, we are going to take the public into our confidence and say to them that the announcement in Saturday's Argus that Secretary Daniels would speak to the children of the I. O. O. F. Orphan Home yesterday afternoon, while authorized by the Home management, was somewhat of a snap judgment on Mr. Daniels, but those who dated him for the talk to the children knew that his well-known love for the orphan children of North Carolina, would cause him to meet their engagement, and so he did, and he was cordially given a real ovation at the Home.

The occasion was opened with a hymn by the children, under the splendid musical direction of Dr. McBee, followed by an appropriate prayer by Rev. Edw. Mack, after which came the talk of Mr. Daniels, which was given in the beautiful Jacob building, and was heard by not only the two hundred children of the Home, but was eagerly followed by an assemblage of citizens that filled the spacious auditorium.

The distinguished visitor was introduced by Col. Jos. E. Robinson, who in a few choice words presented the Secretary as a man who, without many opportunities as a boy, had by reason of the many qualities of labor and perseverance attained to an office which he is administering in such a manner as to attract and compel nation-wide admiration and approval.

At the beginning of his talk Mr. Daniels compared himself to the man who although living under the shadow of Bunker Hill monument yet had never visited this monument, the mere mention of which instilled sentiments of patriotism into the hearts of strangers.

So while voicing his regret at not having visited the Odd Fellows' Home on former occasions, he was most happy in expressing the pleasure afforded him now in mingling with the children of the Orphanage and in hearing what a splendid institution had arisen from the plans conceived by the Odd Fellows founders—Mr. C. H. Wadell, of Raleigh, and the late Congressman Jacobus. Mr. Daniels was very eloquent in eulogizing this tribute of benevolence, and depicted them as types of men for whom he entertained unlimited esteem—the successful and idealistic man of the printing world, who with consummate wisdom reared from the world of business cares to devote his latter years to deeds of charity; the gentle-souled, charitable Jew, whose hand never weaved not whose purse was ever closed to those in destitute walks of life; and the honest politician, actuated by a spirit of patriotism to labor for the good of his fellow citizens.

Mr. Daniels touched on a variety of subjects, and in his earnest and enthusiastic way embellished beautiful thoughts in attractive expressions. His address attracted in noble applications, and one is quite safe in stating that the Secretary made a decided effect on his attentive and interested audience. He handled the noble work North Carolina is doing in caring for her children, her sick and aged sons, placing these beneficiaries on a higher plane than the pursuit of more conspicuous callings.

Warmly congratulating the present trustees on their labors, he called attention to the adjoining home for the blind members of the Order, referring to the fact that one of the present inmates is a survivor of the crew that manned and fought on the historic Merrimack.

Addressing himself particularly to the boys and girls of the orphanage Mr. Daniels told them what splendid opportunities lie within their grasp, quoted examples of successful men whose sole training was received in similar institutions, appealed to his youthful hearers to remain faithful to the ideals instilled by their teachers and stressed the point that the most fortunate boy of the present is not he that is born in wealth and in an honored station of society, but he that amid poverty and hardship is afforded every incentive to overcome obstacles and attain for himself positions of trust and confidence.

In conclusion, Mr. Daniels told the children that he was grateful for the opportunity of being with them and for receiving the inspirations awakened by them and their surroundings, that he and they received the greater benefit out of his visit among them.

Mr. Daniels was given a real ovation of applause by the children and the citizens of Goldsboro, who thoughtfully enjoyed the occasion and felt individually as well as a community benefited by his admirable talk.

After another hymn by the children the large audience was dismissed under the benediction of Rev. D. W. Arnold, pastor of the Christian church.

Mr. Daniels subsequently visited the beautiful Goldsboro Hospital, just opposite the Home and was greatly impressed with its tone and equipment.
